This one really speaks to weddings. so brides look no further. I had contracted a recommended girl and makeup artist only to find that I would have paid over $2.000 to get everyone done up.

That said. I started looking around to find a salon that could accommodate us all at once. and wasn't going to charge my weight in diamonds. In comes Tribes ... they have a smaller salon. but lots of gals working all at one time. I called and spoke with Lisa. who by the way is so sweet. and she helped me get pricing! explained how we could basically rent the place out because there were so many of us.

Lisa set me up with Lindsay for my bridal hair. Lindsay is roughly my age. recently married. and utterly sweet. She gave me suggestions. she even suggested how to update my color to play into the chosen undo. When the day came. she put my hair up and took her time to make sure it wasn't going to move. I had nearly 150 pins in my hair. and didn't feel even one. At the end of the night. dancing my heart out. my hair didn't move 1 inch. She doesn't overcharge either. The bridal hair industry is ridiculously overpriced. and Lindsay is worth what she charges (realistically should/could charge more if she felt inclined. but she's a kind soul).

I loved my hair, I loved the level of attention these folks gave us. and I really felt like a bride after leaving. Tribes is well worth checking out. Lindsay is my suggestion for bridal hair--but all their stylists treated my girls with great kindness. and had each bridesmaid had beautiful updos
